Hi everyone. I’ve broken into Corey’s office so that I may tell you a little bit about what he has in mind for the exam. We really won’t have covered anything new, but still I’d like to give you some suggestions to help you along.

General Suggestions: My biggest suggestion is that you use your quiz taking experience to guide you in what you need help with for the exam. I’m glad Corey and you all spent that extra day just reviewing and answering questions. Also, it’s pretty hard for Corey to ask about ALL of the things that he thinks are important on the quiz, so there may be some questions on the exam that were not asked on the quiz—of course, all of these questions would be within the scope of what Corey told you he would ask on the Quiz review sheet. There may be a topic that Corey doesn’t ask about on the quiz... That doesn’t mean that he will or won’t ask about them on the exam, but to be sure, they’re still fair game. My best suggestions, though, fall in the category of practice. You should start by organizing the material that we’ve covered so far by reading Corey’s review sheets. Then, study up and work on the homework related to those topics, and finally come to Corey when you need help. He’s great at helping people so long as they come early enough. Sometimes he can’t help people if they show up 5 minutes before the exam, but he’ll do his best. My last suggestion is to:
